Groundhog Day

LeRoy Nursery School learned about Groundhog Day, February 2nd . The children also learned about puppets so they made a Groundhog bag puppet. They heard stories and the legend of Groundhog Day. They were happy to hear they'll be six more weeks of winter. Pictured here is the 2 Day Class.

A Winter Day At Love Bugs

The Nursery children at Love Bugs Preschool have been busy learning all about the season of winter. One day they decided to venture outside for a morning of fun. All bundled up, they explored their school grounds looking for signs of winter animals. After their exploration, they spent time enjoying the snow. Some friends made snow angels, some made forts and little snowmen and others just enjoyed running around in the snow together. A fun winter day was had by all!

The members of the LeRoy Town & Country Garden Club are pictured here enjoying their Annual Christmas Party on Wednesday, December 10th at Jules Feltes home. Attendance was great despite the snow storm. Appetizers and Christmas desserts were provided by the Hostess committee. Everyone enjoyed playing Sue Lints' yearly seasonal games. In lieu of a gift exchange, an optional monetary donation for the Backpack Club was collected. LeRotary Notes

It was a chilly winter afternoon at The Greens of the LeRoy as Past President Sam Vagg took the podium in place of President Randy this week. After the Pledge, Prayer, and Four Way Test, our meeting began.

We were delighted to welcome our guests, LeRoy High School Seniors: Clinton Nickens, Jon Pierce, and Avery Malibar. Also in attendance was our program for today, Pat Privatera from LeRoy Physical Therapy/Village Fitness.

Announcements included: There is an initiative to restore the Statue of Liberty on the Creek Bank, stay tuned for more details. The LeRoy Historical Society will be celebrating their 75th birthday, and their Annual Dinner will be March 7th. President Randy is looking for historical items for our Club, please submit to him. Bob Bennett announced there will be a LeRoy Business Council Meeting on February 2, 2015 at the American Legion at 5:30 pm. Bob Bennett was called on for a missed meeting and our fining session began. Lynne Belluscio was fined for acquiring some new cats. Phil Weise paid up for a risky picture of him at camp, and finally Bob Carlsen was delighted to pay for the 101st Anniversary of Derek Monument in LeRoy.

Pat Privatera presented a very informative program today of the past, present, and future of physical therapy. Physical Therapy plays an ever-increasing role in today's health care scene. LeRoy Physical Therapy offers hands-on, cost-effective and efficient alternative for many people - young or old - with recent or chronic musculoskeletal pain or disability. Most of their patients are referred to them by doctors, surgeons, podiatrists, or dentists. However, New York State passed Direct Access in 2006, which allows patients to see qualified physical therapists without a physician's prescription.

Four Chaplains Memorial Service and Wreath Placing

A Four Chaplains Memorial Service was held Sunday, February 1st at the LeRoy United Methodist Church with Pastor Rev. Dr. David Jones participating along with the Genesee County American Legion and hosted by the Botts Fiorito American Legion Post #576.

The four Army Chaplains, Methodist Minister Rev. George Fox, Rabbi Alexander Goode, Ph.D., Rev. Father John Washington a Catholic Priest, and Reformed Church in America Minister Rev. Clark Poling gave up their life jackets to save other civilian and military personnel as the troop ship USAT Dorchester sank on February 3, 1943 during WWII after being torpedoed.

A Memorial Wreath was laid at the Four Chaplains Monument in Trigon Park along with the playing of TAPS.

LeRoy's Four Chaplains Monument is the only known four chaplains monument in New York State outside of New York City.

Mixing Coffee To The Consistency Of Mortar

by Lynne Belluscio

I've never been much of a coffee drinker, although my mornings often begin with a stop at McDonald's for a cup of iced coffee – summer or winter. Growing up, I remember my father was just as happy to have a cup of instant coffee, since my mother never brewed coffee for him. My mother-in-law, on the other hand, had her trusty electric percolator, and made brewed coffee for breakfast and dinner.

This past summer, I spent a week on the Big Island of Hawaii and we visited the Kona Coffee Living History Farm. Friends of mine in the museum business had helped develop this historic site, and it was very interesting to learn about the production of coffee.

This particular area was home-steaded in the early 1900s and in the 1920s, Japanese immigrants arrived and began farming the small coffee plantations. The work was long and tedious. The beans had to be picked by hand and then dried in drying sheds before they could be sold by the bag. But Kona coffee gained a special reputation as a high quality, specialty coffee that today demands high prices. Only coffee raised in this particular place in Hawaii can carry the Kona label.

We were able to taste a wide variety of Kona coffees, and I have to admit, I discovered a wonderful coffee that wasn't bitter and that didn't need sugar and cream to be enjoyed. But not being a coffee connoisseur it would be a travesty for me to have this coffee on my shelf.

One of the most talked about recipes that folks experience at the open hearth dinners at my house, is the "boiled coffee." The recipe is based on an 1837 recipe from the Housekeeper's Book:

There are various recipes for preparing and refining coffee; the following is the best that has ever come under our view, and is available in all places. Procure your coffee fresh-roasted and not too brown, the proportion of a quarter of a pound for three persons. Let it be Mocha, and grind it just before using. Put it in a basin, and break into it an egg, yolk, white, shell and all. Mix it up with a spoon to the consistence of mortar, place it with warm - - not boiling water in the coffee pot; let it boil up and break three times, then stand a few minutes and it will be as clear as amber, and the egg will give it a rich taste. -

Coffee made this way has a wonderful smooth mild taste. The eggs help to coagulate the grounds in the pot and keep them in a clump. The shells help clarify the coffee. A recipe from the American Frugal Housewife mentions that a piece of isenglas (sturgeon bladder – used to make a type of gelatin) or a piece of fish skin could be used instead of the eggs. (I've never used isenglas or fish skin, but suspect that they might impart a fish flavor.)

An article in Civil War Times by Kim O'Connell makes a case for the importance of coffee during the war. Soldiers were given rations of hard tack, pork or bacon, flour or bread, corn, beans and coffee. Sometimes the coffee beans were green and had to be roasted, but usually the beans were already roasted and just needed to be ground. The butt of a rifle was the usual way to pound the coffee beans, although it is interesting to note, that the Sharps Firearm Company manufactured a breech-loading rifle with a coffee grinder built into the stock. Soldiers were willing to give up their other rations – figuring that they could forage for some of the food, but they rarely agreed to give up their coffee.

Before the war, New Orleans was the port of entry for coffee, but the blockade shifted the ships from Costa Rica, Brazil, Java and Ceylon to New York. The irony was that the Union was fighting to save the Union and to abolish slavery, yet coffee – especially from Brazil was produced by slaves under deplorable conditions. By 1864, the US government was buying 40 million pounds of coffee beans!

There were substitutes for coffee. During the Civil War, southern soldiers were not able to get coffee. Chicory was one of the options and I have read where roasted dandelion root could also produce a coffee-like drink. The Frugal Housewife published in 1832 included this comment about coffee substitutions: "... some use dry brown bread crusts and roast them; others soak rye grain in rum and roast it; others roast peas in the same way as coffee. None of these are very good; and peas so used are considered unhealthy. Where there is a large family of apprentices and workmen, and coffee is very dear, it may be worthwhile to use the substitutes or to mix them half and half with coffee; but after all, the best economy is to go without."
